Introduction.....	1
Chapter 1. Jesus' Death in Traditional Christian Thought.....	15
The Three Types of Traditional Interpretations of Christ's Death.....	20
Penal Substitution Interpretations of Christ's Work in New Testament Scholarship.....	24
Theological Problems and Presuppositions.....	32
Premise 1: God's justice must be satisfied before God can remit sins.....	33
Premise 2: Christ's death was absolutely necessary for human salvation, since nothing else could have made it possible for God to remit the sins of human beings without compromising God's justice.....	36
Premise 3: What Christ suffered in his passion and death was sufficient to satisfy God's justice.....	37
Premise 4: In order for Christ to satisfy divine justice, he had to be perfectly sinless.....	41
Premise 5: In order for Christ to die as the substitute for sinful humanity, he had to be fully divine and fully human.....	43
Premise 6: Both the incarnation and the earthly life of God's Son had as their sole objective his substitutionary death for others.....	44
Premise 7: Human beings are saved and delivered from God's wrath solely by Jesus' substitutionary death on their behalf, yet they must still come to faith in order to receive that salvation.....	45
Physical Interpretations of Christ's Work in New Testament Scholarship.....	49
Theological Problems and Presuppositions.....	65
Premise 1: Powers such as sin and death are ontological in nature and as such can be dealt with in much the same way that ontological realities or substances are dealt with in the physical world.....	65
Premise 2: It was not possible for human beings, human nature, or the nature of the created order to be transformed ontologically or delivered from the powers to which they were subject without Christ's incarnation, life, death, and resurrection.....	68
Premise 3: Before the ontological transformation of humanity or the world could be brought about in its eschatological fullness, it was necessary to bring it about in part in the present time.....	70
Premise 4: Although all human beings have been ontologically transformed or united to Christ, each individual must come to faith in order to be saved.....	72
Premise 5: Although the notion of an ontological participation was clear to people in Paul's day, it is no longer clear to people in ours.....	74

Revelational Interpretations of Christ's Work in New Testament Scholarship.....	76
Theological Problems and Presuppositions	79
Premise 1: Christ's death was necessary because what it revealed to human beings could not have been revealed by God in any other way.....	79
Premise 2: Christ's death was necessary because there was no other way in which God could have brought about in human beings the ethical transformation necessary for them to be saved.....	80

Chapter 3. Sacrifice and Atonement in Second-Temple Jewish Thought	125
Sacrificial Interpretation in New Testament Scholarship:
Views and Presuppositions.....	128
Assumption 1: Sacrifices made atonement for sins.....	128
Assumption 2: Sacrifices were thought to "work" in some way to produce certain salvific "effects," such as expiation and purification.....	130
Assumption 3: Sacrifice involved propitiation.....	136
Assumption 4: There could be no remission of sins without sacrifice.....	137
Assumption 5: Sacrifice was understood as substitution.....	138
Assumption 6: Sacrifice was understood in terms of representation and participation.....	139
Assumption 7: Sacrifice reveals the mechanism of sacred violence.....	140
Basic Tenets of Ancient Jewish Sacrificial Thought.....	141
1. Sacrifices were essentially offerings and gifts presented to God.....	142
2. Sacrifice was inseparable from prayers and petitions.....	145
3. What made sacrifices and prayers acceptable to God was the inner disposition and commitment to God's will of those offering them or those on whose behalf they were offered.....	150

Assumption 3: Did sacrifice involve propitiation?.....	185
Assumption 4: Was the remission of sins possible without sacrifice?.....	189
